TV anchor Kat Kerrigan is outraged when fired from the small Virginia station she has worked at for the past ten years. With a new mortgage, her husband overseas and a chronically-ill fourteen-year-old daughter. The timing couldn't be worse. She struggles with anger, resentment and unforgiveness. How could they do that to her, a loyal employee? Two guardian angels, Lieutenants Arman and Zuriel have been assigned to alert Kat to the demonic whispers she believes are her own thoughts. After relocating to Boston, Kat sets out to find solutions for her daughter's illness. She stumbles upon the importance of forgiveness and its direct connection to healing. Soon her own health crisis ups the stakes. She says she has forgiven, but has she really? Spiritual battles rage at strategic points in Kat's life, when both kingdoms vie for her allegiance through her thoughts. Who she listens to, who she agrees with will determine her future and her health.
