In Book Two of a three-part series titled Best of DyingWords—Provoking Thoughts on Life, Death, and Writing from a Retired Homicide Detective and Forensic Coroner, Garry and invited guests from professional disciplines provoke thoughts on broad and fascinating topics in forensic science such as forensic pathology, criminal investigation and procedures, autopsies, evidence processing, and serial killers as well as exploring the age-old wonder—is there life after death?

Best of DyingWords—Provoking Thoughts on Death is far more than a collection of academic articles by blogging’s best thought leaders. It’s arranged and written in a style unique among forensics books, yet contains at its core the positive mental attitude about life success formula that’s central to Napoleon Hill’s classic motivational book, Think And Grow Rich.

Provoking Thoughts on Death has its lighter side, too. You’ll learn thirteen strange superstitions about death, eleven things you can’t do when you’re dead, how to get away with murder, how to avoid being murdered by a serial killer, and the famous dying words uttered by people on their way out the black door.
