Davis L. Ford was born to win. Raised on the plains of West Texas where his dad taught him cowboy ways, Davis, infused with that spirit, chose to work with the land, but in a different manner. He applied his boundless energy and can-do attitude to environmental engineering and became a sought-after expert in the treatment of industrial wastes and water quality---nationally and internationally recognized as one of the outstanding contributors to the science of engineering. In other words, land and water, worldwide, are less polluted today than ever before because of his work. This story is about Davis impressive achievements and what made them possible. Of course, he tips his hat to his West Texas upbringing and those bigger-than-life personalities he lived with and was inspired by. Their values created the blanket under Davis saddle---the one he has ridden all his life---from West Texas outward to the world. But, he will also tip his hat to two important mentors and several colleagues---as well as being at the right place at the right time. All make for an interesting story of one person s life.
