What is Nothing? At first, the answer might seem simple, but countless scientists, artists and writers have come to realise that the idea is much more complicated than it seems. This important new book, produced by the British artist Graham Gussin together with curator Ele Carpenter, investigates the subject. Concepts such as absence, invisibility, outer space and infinity, all of which form part of what we think of as Nothing, have played a key role in the work of artists as well as scientists throughout the twentieth century.

This book brings together the most wide-ranging selection of explorations into the concept of Nothing ever published in one volume. With contributions from writers such as JG Ballard and Jorge Luis Borges; academics including Isaac Asimov and Paul Virilio; and artists including Gilbert & George and Andy Warhol, this book provides a fascinating and provocative look at a subject which goes to the heart of modern creative thought.

Nothing features art projects by some of the world's best-respected contemporary artists, including Liam Gillick, Maurizio Cattelan, Andreas Gursky, Hans Haacke, Tatsuo Miyajima, Ed Ruscha and Catherine Yass -- many of them specially produced for this book.

Coincides with an international touring exhibition in Sunderland (England), Vilnius (Lithuania) and Malmo (Sweden) throughout 2001.
